Students, faculty, and staff are invited to the 90-minute documentary screening and free CLE “Pardon Me: Exploring the Harms of Criminal Records and the Benefits of Executive Pardons.” The program will include a screening, a panel discussion including the film’s producer/director, experts, people with lived experience in the Pennsylvania criminal justice system, and the opportunity for Q&A. It will explain why Pardon Coaching is an easy way for law students and attorneys to provide pro bono service to an under-represented community.

Pennsylvania has long been among the country’s most heavily incarcerated and heavily supervised states. When a sentence is fully completed, the conviction remains. Criminal records are available online and used daily, often illegally, to deny jobs, promotions, loans, housing, etc. The only way to remove a conviction from the record is by a pardon from the Governor, and the only way to get to the Governor is through the Board of Pardons.

In this program, you will learn what having a criminal record has meant to several Pennsylvanians and their families - what they have done despite those records and how those records have held them back. You will also learn the process for obtaining a pardon, the opportunity to help people from your county apply, and the need for further reforms.

MODERATOR AND PANELISTS INCLUDE:

Shuja Moore, Documentary Film Maker and Producer/Director of “Pardon Me”. At 22, Moore was arrested and convicted of an accidental murder following an incident involving firearm possession. He served 12 years in prison and became a filmmaker to tell his story and the stories of those from marginalized communities. In 2020, Moore was named the Mike Lee Fellow at Philadelphia Lawyers for Social Equity.

Professor SpearIt is an internationally recognized scholar and the author of American Prisons: A Critical Primer on Culture and Conversion to Islam. He teaches courses including Evidence, Criminal Procedure, and Criminal Law and has taught at San Quentin State Prison.

Professor of Practice Chalon Young runs Pitt Law’s State Criminal Defense Practicum and teaches the Philosophy of Crime and Punishment and Criminal Procedure I and II.

Barbara Griffin, Esq. is Director of the Pro Bono Center of the Allegheny County Bar Foundation, which mobilizes well-trained volunteers to help meet the legal needs of individuals with low incomes in Allegheny County.

Alea Tiberi, Pitt Law 3L who assists pardon applicants on a pro bono basis.

Attendance is capped at 120 people. Food and drink will be provided.
